

In Turquoise Class for Black History Month, we looked at Alma Thomas. She was an African-American teacher who turned into an artist. In 1924, she became the first person to graduate from the Fine Arts Department at Howard University.

Her art style was lots of bold colours and using short, jagged brush strokes to create her paintings. She liked to look at nature to help her think of new ideas. We have made a mosaic in the style of her work.

